International Scientific-Professional
Symposium "Textile Science & Economy"

Digital Fashion

26-01-2024, Zagreb, Croatia
University of Zagreb
Faculty of Textile Technology

On January 26, 2024, the University of Zagreb Faculty of Textile Technology is organizing the scientific and professional symposium "Textile Science & Economy", the 16th consecutive and the 6th international one with the theme
"DIGITAL FASHION"

On behalf of the organizers of the symposium, we are honoured to invite you to participate in the International Symposium on Textile Science & Economy (in short: TSE 2024), whose primary goal is to strengthen cooperation between the academic community and the business sector.

The program of the TZG 2024 Symposium includes invited lectures by renowned experts from universities, research institutions and the business sector, virtual poster presentations of scientific research, artistic and professional works. The symposium will accompany numerous other activities, such as an exhibition of works by students and professors from the Faculty of Textile Technology. There will also be an opportunity for meetings, exchange of opinions and experiences, and the establishment of cooperation between participants from universities, institutes and companies.

The intended theme of the symposium, "Digital Fashion" opens a wide range of opportunities to submit work from various fields of science and art, emphasizing the application of advanced digital technologies to fashion. Contributions that apply new digital technologies to textile, apparel and footwear research are also desirable. You can make your scientific, artistic, and professional contribution by submitting an article that will be published in its entirety in a peer-reviewed collection of papers in digital format and simultaneously presented through virtual poster presentations during the symposium.

The official language of the symposium will be English (without simultaneous translation) and Croatian.
